KUALA LUMPUR: Aurelius Technologies Bhd's (Atech) wholly-owned unit BCM Electronic Corporation Sdn Bhd has embarked on manufacturing 5G communication modules with applications in Internet of things and automotive components.

In a statement, Atech said this marked its foray into the new automotive industry sector.

In addition, BCM has set plans to build an additional plant in 2024 at the recently acquired 301,874 square feet industrial land at Kulim Techno City within the vicinity of Kulim High Technology Park.

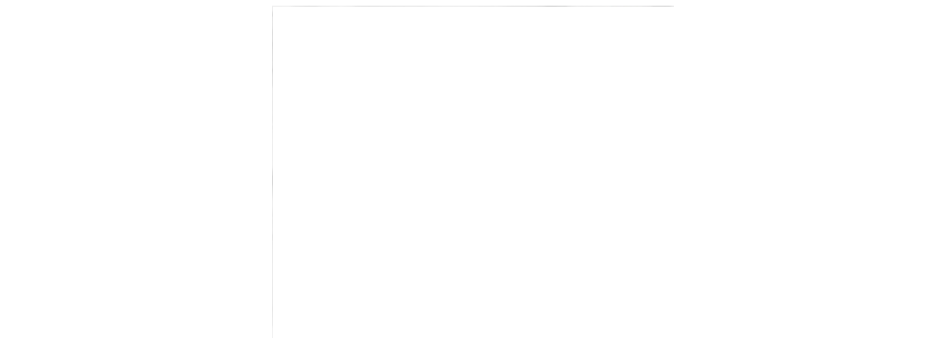

The new facility will become an automotive hub for BCM, aligning with the company's strategic plans to accelerate its focus on automotive components manufacturing and to develop its outsourced semiconductor assembly and test business.

"Our commitment to innovation and sustainability underscores our vision for the next 30 years and beyond, as we strive to empower the path of our sustainable growth and redefine the technological landscape," said executive director and chief executive officer Loh Hock Chiang.

The company also highlighted its commitment to sustainability with the announcement of a national roadmap towards net zero emission by 2050.

The initiatives include the installation of charging stations for hybrid and electric vehicles and implementation of 1.95MWac rooftop solar at the existing BCM plant by October 2023, targeting a 30 per cent substitution of production electricity consumption with solar power.
